Tomorrow, Tuesday, February 5, the Likud party is having primaries. Following the candidates' campaigns shows that their investments in developing ancient sites and tourism in East Jerusalem and the West Bank is playing a major role. In the videos of the candidates, we can see that in recent years, tourism-driven settlement has become integral to the settlers' methods of operation. What was previously termed 'hidden settlement' has quietly transformed amid the Likud primaries into open policy. The extent of the Israeli government's investments in the tourist settlement is now being exposed.
